BABIES USED FOR BAIT. How English Hunters Capture Crocodiles in Ceylon.

If mothers in general showed the nerve exhibited by mothers in Ceylon, trouble would be spared in many a household. "Babies wanted for crocodile bait. Will be returned alive," says the New Zealand Tablet. If newspapers abounded in Ceylon as much as crocociles do, rays the Cevlon Catholic Mes senger, advertisements worded like the foregoing would be common in their want columns.

As it is, the English crocodile-hunter has to secure his baby by personal solici ation. He is often successful, for Ceylon parents, as a rule, have unbounded confidence in the hunters and will rent their babies out to be used as crocodile bait for a small consideration. Ceylon crocodile suffer greatly from ennui; they prefer to lie quite still, soothed by the sun's glittering rays, and while away their lazy lives in meditation. But when a dark-brown infant, with curling toes, sits on a bank and blinks at them, they throw off their cloak of laziness and make their preparations for a delicate morsel of Ceylonese humanity.

When the crocodile gets about halfway up the bank, the hunter, concealed hehind some reeds, opens fire, and the hangry crocodile has his appetite and life taken away at the same time, the baby being brought home safely to i's loving mamma. The sportsman secures the skin and head of the crocodile and the rest of the carcass the natives make use of.

It Rained Blood.

Gallant Captain Trennery of the illfated steamship Queensmore of the Joh. son line, which was burned in the Engish Channel and afterward beached while completing her first round trip, arrived in port yesterday in command of the new Queensmore, and was given a warm reception by his large circle of friends, says the New York Star. The new vessel was to have been called the Parkmore, but the name was changed by the Johnson company to Queensmore. The craft is not as large as the burned vessel, nor as elegantly fitted out, but has many good qualities, Captain Trennery said yesterday that the lost vossel was the finest that floated the Atlantic. She never rolled or pitched, no matter how angry the seas were, but rode the waves like a duck.

Prohibition in Iowa.

That portion of the inaugural address of Gov. Boies which relates to the subject of prohibition is mainly intended for the consolation and encouragement of the Democrats; but it presents some facts and suggests others which are peculiarly worthy of Republican study. The prohibitory laws are ignored and despised in most of the large cities of the State, he says: the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage has not been diminished; and public sentiment, as expressed at the last election, is clearly in favor of the abandonment of a policy which has been on trial since 1882 and has failed to accomplish the results that were promised and expected. There can be no d-ubt upon any of these points. The facts are notorious, and the lesson which they convey is definite and conclusive. When the Republicans originally voted for prohibition, giving it a majority of 30,000, they believe that it was practicable; but experience has proved that it is not. Therefore, they are under no obligation to longer defend and uphold it. The party can not afford to support it on the mere ground of con sistency, now that it has plainly turned out to be a disappointment and a misfortune. There is nothing to be gained, but much to be lost, by that sort of obstinacy. To make adherence to the prohibitory idea a test of Republican fidelity is simply to drive men into the Democratic party, as the election records plainly demonstrate. At the time of the adoption of this unlucky policy Iowa was securely and stalwartly Republican. The Democrats were without any chance or hope in the State, the majority against them was so large and immovable. They then had only 5 of the 50 members of the Senate, and 23 of the 99 members of the House. Now they have 22 of the 50 Senators and 50 of the 100 Representatives, and the Governor besides. This looks very much like a revolution. Such a change in such a time has rarely, if ever, had a precedent in American State politics. The explanation lies wholly in the fact that the people have been leaving the Republican party because of its attitude on the prohibition question. They have had no other reason for deserting its standard. They gave it a plurality of 32,000 in 1888, when it appealed to them on national issues; and in the very next year, when State issues only were inyear, when State issues only were involved, they gave a plurality of over 6000 against it, defeated its candidate for the highest office at stake, and very nearly depriving it of all power in the Legislature. This does not mean that a majority of the people of Iowa are in favor of granting general indulgence to saloons and drunkenness. They are intalligent moral and salf-respecting permitted in the salf-respecting permitted i saloons and drunkenness. They are in-telligent, moral and self-respecting pe-ple, and would be glad, no doubt, to have liquor banished forever from the world. But they are not willing to sustain a policy of temperance reform which has been fully tried and found miserably wanting. What they desire in the matter of dealing with the liquor traffic is a law that can be enforced, and that will reduce the evils of intemper-ance as fast as possible. If the Rejublican party proposes to maintain its as-cendency in Iowa, and to regain the ground it has lost since 1882, it n ust provide such a law in place of the pre-sent prohibitory legislation; and the sconer it does so, the sconer its fortunes will begin to improve.

task to perform. It is said that Barnum, hearing of this wonderful woman, offered her large pay to go with his show. Mary would have gone, but her family objected, and so she remained at home.

One of the brightest advertising men in Chicago made his rise through the fall of another. It was some years ago, we will take for a wife—the American girl.

We have just been admiring one of the handsomest oil pictures of "Jacque"Roses that we have ever seen, and hadit been in an art store we should have known that agood price would be asked for it. But imagine a work of art of such intrin sic value being obtained for nothing! for that is practically the case, as it is a supplement to Demorest's Family Magazine for April. This wonderful publication

Which said conveyance was made in trust to see when, as a mere boy, he was tramping when, as a mere boy, he was tramping the secret that it is and whereas default had been made in the payment of said note and in search of any sort of a job which offered, says the Chicago Heraid. His last nickie had gone for foed, and one afternoon he was walking through a down town alley, tired and disgusted. Happening to glance upward he saw a boy leaning out of a window. In a moment the boy lost ballance and fell to the ground with the customary dull, sickening thud. The discouraged man hastened to the boy's side has on its Easter garb, and it certainly is an attractive one.
